Utopian Ideologies as Motives for Genocide. Genocides have existed for as long as humans have recorded history. There are instances of the intentional destruction of an entire group of people in the Hebrew Bible, and the Romans destroyed Carthage in a manner that sought to make impossible the continued existence of Carthaginians.

A Century of Genocide: Utopias of Race

and Nation

Genocide, Weitz argues, results from utopian ambitions when tied to ideologies of race and backed up by state power. It occurs, moreover, under conditions of extreme social crisis. Weitz roots genocide in the zeal to generate homogeneous societies, which he sees articulated in racism and nationalism.

A century of genocide : utopias of race and nation : Weitz ...

"This ambitious and broad-ranging study of genocide in the twentieth century is one of the most illuminating works of comparative history to appear in recent years. It shows in graphic and sometimes gut-wrenching detail how a vicious combination of racist ideology, power hungry leadership, and a popular willingness to participate in mass murder can result in the most appalling crimes against ...

Eric Weitz attempts to put together a comprehensive view of the Genocides in the 20th century by looking at the twin foci of racial utopia and nationalism when conceptualizing genocide. This is a shorter book for the subject that was undertaken and given the length does an excellent job of looking at each genocide and tying them together.
